For Immediate Release

(Richmond, Virginia)—The Library of Virginia and the State Records Center will be closed Wednesday, May 9, and re-open for normal hours on Thursday, May 10.

In observation of Public Services Week in the Commonwealth of Virginia, the Library and Records Center will be closed May 9 for a Staff Development Day.

Staff members at both locations will attend sessions on conducting effective meetings, using new technology, and managing records.

Nettie Meluch, associate professor of management development at the University of Richmond's Robins School of Business, will deliver the keynote address on "Workforce Skills of the Future."

No library fines will accrue on May 9, and any holds that were due to expire will be extended to May 10.

Library card holders can still use the resources on the Library's Web sites (<http://www.lva.virginia.gov/> and <http://www.virginiamemory.com/>).

The Library of Virginia and the State Records Center will re-open at 9 a.m. on May 10.
